THE Kentucky State election, held on the 1st, resulted in the re-election of J. W. Tate as Treasurer without opposition, and J. H. Lewis, Appellate Judge, by a large majority. The election, except in a few places, was a quiet one, and a small vote was polled. Returns show Republican gains in both Senators and Representatives.

In the House of Commons, on the 1st, Parnell was "named" for offensive language and for disregarding the authority of the Chair, and Gladstone moved his suspension for the remainder of the sitting. Parnell rose and interrupted Gladstone, and said he would not go through the farce of awaiting the vote, as the Speaker interfered with the freedom of discussion. He then quitted the House. The motion for his suspension was carried—173 to 14.

THE Virginia Conservative Democrats met in convention at Richmond on the 4th. John W. Daniel was nominated for Governor. The resolutions declare the maintenance of the public debt to be essential to the prosperity of the State and condemn repudiation in every form; but pledge the party to use all lawful efforts, consistent with honor and integrity, to secure the settlement of the outstanding debt, with the consent of her creditors, upon as favorable terms as possible. A resolution of sympathy with President Garfield was adopted.

THERE was an exciting scene in the British House of Commons, on the 4th, caused by Bradlaugh's attempt to force an entrance in spite of the resistance of a squad of policemen, commanded by Dr. Lyon Playfair, Deputy Speaker of the Commons. Bradlaugh failed, though not until he had made a desperate struggle, in which he was utterly exhausted and his clothes torn. He was removed from the lobby by the police and escorted into the palace yard, where he stood for some time with his arms folded, three officers barring his way to the House. In the House there was a wordy war, quite as exciting as the muscular war outside. The Speaker decided that Bradlaugh had no right to enter, and both Gladstone and Sir Stafford Northcote indorsed this decision. Bradlaugh and Sir Wilfrid Lawson protested against the exclusion of Bradlaugh, and offered resolutions which, if passed, would have the effect of permitting Bradlaugh to take his seat. The Speaker refused to entertain Lawson's resolutions, and both Bradlaugh and Lawson while speaking were declared out of order. Bradlaugh subsequently went to Bow Street for a summons against the police, which was refused, but the magistrate urged him to file information for assault.

PROF. BELL's electrical experiments to determine the exact location of the bullet in the President's body have been reasonably successful. On the 1st two tests were made, the first by Prof. Bell, and the second by Mr. Tainter, his assistant. The telephone plate was passed over the surface of the abdomen near the spot where the slight discoloration of the skin was noticeable a few days after the shooting, and in the region in which the doctor supposed the ball to lie. The presence of the ball was indicated with exactness by both tests, both resulting the same. It is now certain that it is located at a point within five inches of the surface, four and a half inches to the right and below the navel, and just above the groin. The physicians claim that this undeniably establishes the correctness of their original theory as to the location of the ball. There is but a single drawback in this test, and that is that they can't tell just how deeply imbedded in the body the ball is. It is known to be within five inches, because the limit of the machine is fixed at that distance; it is possible, however, that it is only two inches beneath the surface. According to the surgeons, however, it can make very little difference whether it is two or five, so that it is soundly imbedded and encysted. As long as no inconvenience results from the location, no attempt will be made to extract the ball. The improvement in the President's condition continued, and Dr. Hamilton prescribes that by the middle of August he would be able to resume "a certain class of official duties"—presumably the affixing of his signature to necessary official documents.

THE investigation made by Drs. Thayer and McEachern, representing the United States Treasury Cattle Commission, into the disease prevailing among cattle in certain districts of Nova Scotia, leads to the conclusion that the disease is not contagious, and that most likely it is due to a poisonous weed which grows among the herbage. The deaths of the animals have been caused by blood-poisoning, the blood changing to the color and consistency of water. The disease has up to the present been confined to districts adjacent to the towns. Both gentlemen will recommend that the United States Government send a skilled biologist to examine the herbage of the district where the disease has prevailed.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL MACVEAGH has, at the request of Postmaster-General James, given an opinion as to whether under the act of Congress of April 7, 1880, allowance for expedition in carrying mails is limited to 50 per cent. of the original contract. The Attorney-General holds that the law specifically makes this limitation, and that it can not be exceeded; that the Postmaster-General can not go beyond this limit, and the expedited service must provide an increase of office and material employed to correspond with the increase of pay as compared with the original contract. This opinion is an official condemnation of the system followed by Brady in the star-route matters of increasing the pay of expedited routes out of all proportion to the original service contracted for and to the increase of material and men actually employed to carry out the expedited service. The Department will follow this opinion, and stick to 50 per cent. limitation in increase.

KANSAS STATE NEWS.

The committee having in charge arrangements for the Soldiers' Reunion at Topeka have issued the following circular:

"We extend an earnest personal invitation to every soldier and sailor who served in the war for the Union to come to the Soldiers' Reunion to be held in Topeka, September 15th, 1881. All the attention in human power to bestow shall be given. The very lowest rates of fare have been obtained, bringing it within the reach of all to come. Every year diminishes our numbers. In a few short years these reunions will cease, and all the veterans who wore the blue will have crossed the pontoon to the other side. By all the associations of the past, by all the ties of comradeship never to be forgotten, we appeal to you to meet us at the camp-fire once again, and let the old-time bugle, life and drum stir within us a memory of heroic days that shall never return." Signed by J. B. Johnson, Chairman; S. E. Seldon, Geo. H. Evans, Jos. G. Waters, W. H. Ward, Committee on Invitation. Address all communications to W. H. Ward, Secretary, Topeka.

Pursuant to call, delegates from all parts of the State assembled at Turner Hall, Atchison, on the 1st, to form a German-American Immigration Society for Kansas. A permanent organization was effected by the election of Robert Farberger, of Atchison, as President; Alfred Meyer, John Wolruff, of Lawrence, and George Lanher, of Topeka, Vice-Presidents; John Heischoltz, of Atchison, Secretary; C. Rothenberger, of Leavenworth, and Lambert Willscatt, of Atchison, as a Board of Directors. A platform was adopted declaring that the Prohibition amendment had turned all foreign immigration away from Kansas, to the serious injury of the growth and prosperity of the State; that the agents of other States had used this fact to prejudice emigrants against Kansas, and that this State offered unusual inducements in her soil, climate, cheap lands and other advantages to industrious and economical people to obtain homes. The platform further pledges the society to assist emigrants to Kansas to obtain employment and homes, and to assist and protect them against fraud. It demands, in conclusion, a repeal of the Constitutional amendment and the Prohibition law.

The Richmond (Va.) papers recently contained an account of a romantic marriage in that city, of which the following is the sequel, as given in a Richmond dispatch of the 23rd ult.:

Society here is in a flutter of excitement to-day over a social sensation, the occasion for which is the betrothal marriage of a young lady of ittemod, who moves in the highest circles, by a man calling himself Ictio Marvin. The victimized lady is the niece of one of the most distinguished members of the bar of this State and a gentleman of the highest social position. She is also connected with many other excellent families here and in other parts of the State. She possesses a noble character, and in person she is an exceedingly pretty blonde of less than twenty-five years of age. She is a great favorite in Richmond society, and has not a single enemy among both men and women in the city. Being dependent upon her widowed mother for support, she had for some time before the marriage union with Marvin considered the propriety of securing the position of governess. About three weeks ago her attention was called to an advertisement in the Richmond Dispatch offering to be from a widower in Ohio, who desired to secure the services of a governess to take charge of his little girl, about six or seven years old. The lady quickly decided to apply for the position. She accordingly visited her place, a well-known Episcopal rectory, and met the man who offered her the position. She was at once charmed by him, and he was equally charmed by her. They were introduced to each other by a mutual friend, a prominent lawyer, in which he agreed to be to $4,000 on his wife after the death of her father, and to be to $2,000 on the death of her mother. The groom represented himself as a man of fortune, and of excellent social position. He was a native of Ohio, and had lived for many years. Not a suspicion of the truthfulness of these representations were entertained by the bride's friends, who were all anxious to see the marriage consummated. During his stay here Marvin called on several of the leading citizens, and presented himself as a man of high social position, and was kindly received. By some of these he was introduced to the First National Bank, where he exhibited letters of credit that gained for him the ready recognition as a respectable man. Upon the strength of these representations Marvin presented a draft for $500 upon a well-known bank, which was cashed, and he was then cashed. Several days elapsed after the departure of the newly married couple before any inquiry was received from them. In the meantime the First National Bank received notification from their Chicago correspondent that Marvin's draft was a palpable forgery. This was communicated to the girl's friends, who were forced to the conclusion that their loved one had been made the victim of a vile imposition. The parties purporting to have given Marvin letters of introduction were at once telegraphed to. While the names of many were known to be fictitious, the result was that the others came that the letters were forged. The first intelligence from the unhappy bride was a telegram from Albany, New York, in which she inquired if the fatal accident to her mother in N. Y. was reported in a Northern newspaper, was true. It would have been a relief to her to learn that her mother was dead, and she would have been able to avoid all publicity. She would consent only to travel at night. She is expected to arrive in the morning on the Northern train which will reach here to-night at 10:45. The man who was acted such an unprincipled part in this affair is about thirty-five years old and is very dark.
